

ABSTRACT

A fuel additive, especially for gasoline and diesel engines, has a major portion of lithium aromatic sulfonate and an organic peroxide; for example, lithium benzene sulfonate and as the peroxide methyl ethyl ketone peroxide and/or tert-butyl perbenzoate. The additive provides better mileage and better operation for internal combustion engines.